3. Team Contributions and Commit Evidence

Each member owns one of the three main areas of Part 3 and committed from their own GitHub account on their own branches. Work was merged into main through pull requests, so there were no merge conflicts.

The commit and pull request amounts are based on the repository history available at the time that this ReadMe was written.

Member	Branches	Part 3 area	Commits
Kandyce Smit (ST10467645)	kandyce-part3-auth, kandyce-part3-cicd, kandyce-part3-docs, kandyce-part3-final	Users table, BCrypt hashing, JWT, register and login, roles, profile and user endpoints, CI/CD pipeline, Postman collection, README	22
Kristen Keve (ST10472683)	kristen-part3-gateway	Menu and document endpoints, DTOs and mappers, XML comments and Swagger, global exception middleware	10
Thamsanqa Ncube (ST10482062)	thami-part3-deploy, thami-part3-final	Order endpoints, Functions client, Dockerfiles, Docker Compose, Docker Hub v3.0 images, Azure VPS, runbook	11

Anyone can reproduce the numbers from a clone with these commands (they work in PowerShell, Command Prompt and Git Bash):

git fetch --all git shortlog -sn --all --no-merges git log --all --no-merges --format="%h %ad %an %s" --date=short git log --all --graph --oneline --decorate

GitHub's Insights > Contributors page only counts commits whose e-mail address is linked to a GitHub account, so the terminal output above is the complete record.

Branch and commit conventions: one branch per person and feature area, commit messages in the form feat:, fix:, docs:, test: followed by what changed (for example feat: add queue-triggered order processing with status lifecycle), commits spread over several days, and every branch merged by pull request.

4. Testing summary

5. AI disclosure

Please note you can find the AI disclosure in our README under “AI Disclosure”:

AI Disclosure

The brief asks us to disclose AI use. This is what we used and how.

Tool	What it was used for	What we did ourselves
ChatGPT (OpenAI)	The Part 2 and Part 3 video intro, outro and title card images.	The prompts were written by Kandyce. The text on every image was checked by hand.

No AI voice is used in the video: every member speaks in their own voice. The images are decorative. They contain no code or results.
